Burglary in Arlington.

Thursday evening, between 5.30 and 6 o'clock, the residence of Mrs. E. J. Pike at 63 Gray street, Arlington, was entered and robbed of a miscellaneous collection of small pieces of jewelry to the amount of $200. The family was absent from the house at the time but evidently returned in season to prevent a more serious plundering of the premises, as valuable wearing apparel was found piled up in one of the rooms ready to be taken away. The house had been left securely locked but entrance had been affected by means of a rear window. The day before a man had visited the house on the pretext that he was an electric wire inspector and was looking for crossed wires, and it is thought on this pretext he laid his plans to rob the premises. Chief Urquhart especially warns citizens not to admit to specialist in his or her line, so that the their houses, on any pretext, either program was delightfully varied and of alleged gas or electric inspectors, as this is an old game of thieves which has recently been played in Boston and suburbs. soprano soloist, appearing three times on the program, and Mrs. Albertina Hay- always be vouched for, and their errand is usually brief and to the point.

A Sudden Death.

The family, relatives, and friends had a sad shock in the sudden death of Mrs. health and had spent the evening with her eldest brother, ex-Selectman Walter Crosby, at his home at 88 Lake street. She went to her room somewhat after ten o'clock and evidently passed away a short time afterward, dying apparently without pain or struggle and immediately following the shock of apoplexy which was the cause of death. WASHINGTON LETTER

[Special Correspondence.] Public Printer Stillings proposes to dispense with horses and wagons as an adjunct to the government printing office and to replace them with automobiles. He will confer with the president about it and will endeavor to get congress to appropriate for the purchase of

The immense business of the printing office requires about fifty wagons and more than a hundred horses. These are used in the hauling of paper and supplies, the delivery of printed matter to the various government buildings and the like. It costs heavily to maintain all these wagons and horses and the teamsters necessary to look after them. Mr. Stillings thinks he could save the government about $200,000 a year by turning to automobiles. It would, of course, require a heavy sum to buy the automobiles, but maintenance would not be a heavy item.

The printing office already has an electric plant, where the automobiles could be charged, so that there would be scarcely any additional expense for power. Then, too, it is calculated that better time could be made and fewer men would be required.

Oregon Land Frauds.

Francis J. Heney, special counsel for the government in the land fraud cases in Oregon, called on the president a few days ago and talked with him about the cases. Representative Binger Hermann of Oregon, former commissioner of the general land office, will be brought to trial in Washington during the last week in March. There are two indictments against Mr. Hermann, one in this jurisdiction and one in Oregon. The District case will be prosecuted first, to be followed by the Oregon case. Mr. Heney will conduct both cases.

Annapolis In Plaster.

A new attraction for visitors at the navy department is a representation of the grounds and buildings at the Naval academy at Annapolis as they will look when the scheme of improvement now being carried out is completed.

Two huge plaster models have been prepared and placed on exhibition in the main reception room of the secretary of the navy. They show clearly the topography of the ground, and models of the buildings are all presented. The work, in fact, is a miniature of the academy territory on the scale of one inch to thirty-two feet.

Door of Libby Prison.

avenue. It is the only part of that historic jail that was not removed to Chidown in Richmond and transferred to the western city twenty years ago.

The door is six feet high and three and a half feet wide. It is made of southern pine planking an inch thick, five inches wide and grooved. It is braced by three crosspieces, each an inch thick and eight inches wide. On the back the marks of the old fashioned pointed hinges on which it hung are plain, and on the top crosspiece are the imprint and the broken bolts of what was evidently a stout iron bar or brace. The planking, originally painted a dark brown, is now ashy gray with age. The lock is a cumbersome, old style one, size 6 by 8 inches.

Rude Carvings.

The lettering rudely carved on these boards excites deep interest.

One or two primitive attempts at artistic carving were made, but most of the prisoners seem to have been content with plain lettering. A few days ago an old member of the Thirtieth New York volunteers, who when a prisoner had carved his name on the door, hearing that it was in Washington came to see it. He recognized it at once and, drawing a huge key from his pocket, tried the lock. It fitted perfectly. The key, he said, had been used in the lock when he was confined there, and on his release he had secretly taken it away.

Accurate Bookkeeping. A committee of experts from the treasury department recently finished an examination of the books of F. L. Evans, who for ten years has been distributing officer for the department of agriculture. The committee found that the government owes the clerk $2.10, for which a voucher will be issued. The examination was made necessary by Mr. Evans' ill health. He has taken an indefinite leave of absence, and he has had to turn all his accounts over to an assistant. During the ten years he was disbursing clerk he paid out more than $41,000,000. No officer of the government ever made such a record for accuracy. Had the discrepancy been ten times as great and had that money been due the government instead of Evans there would have been no remark about it.

The Favorite Flower.

The governors of the house of representatives have changed the color of their floral decorations. It used to be the flaming scarlet carnation that found favor in the eyes of Cannon, Dalzell, Payne and Grosvenor, but now it is a pale pink shade of that delightful flower that is in favor.

Fake Antiques,

One of the most remarkable pieces of fake carving the National museum has ever seen was submitted to Professor Baird when he was living several years ago, said Professor Holmes the other day. It came from some one down in Texas and was a beautiful piece of work in smooth stone about three feet long. It was a grotesque animal made up with part of the head of a rhinoceros, the feet of an elephant, the beak of a parrot, the tail of a lizard and the hind feet of an alligator. But it was clearly a fake, for the work was too fine and the design was such as none of the Indian tribes ever conceived. It was sent back and afterward lost sight of and possibly now is the show piece in some private collection. CARL SCHOFIELD.

HAIR AND BEARDS.

They Have Played Important Parts In the World's History,

In centuries past the human hair played an important part in all judicial proceedings. Those that were permitted to wear beard and hair had rights that could not be claimed by the shorn and shaved. When men made oath they touched their beard and hair, and women placed the finger tips of the right hand on their tresses.

Servants were obliged to have their hair cut, and if a freedman went into slavery he had to divest himself of his hirsute adornments. An adult adopted by foster parents was obliged to have his beard shaved, and the shaving of beard and hair was a punishment inflicted on criminals. The jurisprudence of our ancestors dealt with punishment "by skin and hair" for small offenses and "by neck and hand" for greater

There has always been more or less superstition about hair. Great strength was implied by it, and wizards and witches knew of concoctions of hair by which they poisoned enemies. Cat's hair was especially named in the category of poisonous hairs, and even at the beginning of the seventeenth century Paulus Zacchias, a famous physician, writes of the virulent poison of the hair of cats.

Among civilized people such superstitious beliefs have gone out of existence, and only Malays give their enemies tiger hairs in broth to kill them.

THE HUMAN RIBS.

Man Has Twelve Pairs, and Woman Has Just the Same. A man who had been sick said he was so thin he could count his ribs. When I heard this statement I asked, "How many did you count?" He was unable to answer. Several friends were standing by, and the query was put to them. Not a man could tell the number of his ribs. One bright chap said in all seriousness that a woman has one more rib than a man, because man lost one in the fashioning of woman. And, do you know, this belief is common? Suddenly spring the question on any acquaintance you may happen to meet in the day's journeying. Unless he be a medical man he will in all probability be unable to answer.

It is an anatomical fact that man has twelve pairs of ribs and woman the and in all probability Eve was made of one of these. A man could manage to struggle through life without his free ribs, and I have no doubt that ere long some corset manufacturer will require woman to have hers removed in order to lengthen her waist and to reduce its girth. To break a few of the asternal ribs (ten altogether) is nothing; to day, 9.07, a. m, 4.36, p. m. break some of the sternal (fourteen in number) ones is far more serious.—New York Press.

MASCULINE DIMPLES.

They Are Not Always Appreciated by Their Owners. "Dimples are just as common among men as among women," says a New York beauty doctor, "only they don't show off to such good advantage. Beard and mustache combine to hide their charm. Anyhow, men are not proud of dimples. They consider them a sign of effeminacy. Now that smooth faces are the fashion, the man with a dimple in cheek or chin is hard put to it to hide that beauty mark. In his extremity he seeks relief from me,

"'What can I do with these confounded dimples? he asks. "'Take 'em out,' I advise.

"'Can you do it?' he asks.

"'Sure,' says I.

"'All right,' says he, 'go ahead.' "Then I begin treatment. In the past year I have removed sets of dimples from men's faces that any woman of their acquaintance would have paid $100 for. All men with money to spend patronize the beauty doctor more shamelessly than they used to, but of all the miracles they wish performed there is none they insist upon so stoutly as the removal of dimples."-Exchange.

"Watches" on Board Ship.

On board all ships a series of "watches" are established, so that work is shared equally among the sailors. To aid this object also the crews are divided into two divisions, starboard and port. A ship's day commences at noon, and there are seven watches. The watch which is on duty in the forenoon one day has the afternoon next day, and the men who have four hours' rest one night have eight hours the next. This is the reason for having "dog watches," which are made by dividing the hours between 4 p. m. and 8 p. m. into two.

Rheumatism and Tan. The discovery of a remedy for rheumatism by means of tan was accidentally made by a tanner of Ulm, Wurttemberg. One day he fell into one of his own vats, and, as no one was Ladies near, he had to remain in the tanning And liquid for over half an hour. When rescued he found, it is said, that his rheumatism had entirely left him. He then turned doctor and treated by means of a system called electrotannotherapia.

Victor Hirtzier, who served two years in the czar's kitchens at the Winter palace in St. Petersburg, has given some interesting details as to the cuisine of the imperial household and the precautions taken against any attempt to poison the autocrat of all the Russias. The head chef of the imperial kitchens holds the rank of general in the Russian army, receives a salary of more than $50,000 a year and is an important official of the state. Under him there is an army of some 300 men as chefs, underchefs and subordinates and also the keepers of the wine cellars. Every dish that is prepared for the imperial table must first be partaken of by a major of the army; the food is then placed in a closed shaft, which the major also enters, and it ascends to the dining room of the czar, where the major again partakes of it, and, no ill effects ensuing, it is then served to the imperial household. The menu is ordered each day by the czar, who is a hearty eater and who occasionally demands that new dishes be invented by his chef. The dining room in which the regular meals are taken is small, made of cast iron, is bombproof and is sealed like a bank vault between meals.

Piling Up a Needless Surplus.

There is deducted from the pay of every soldier in the regular army 121/2 cents every month for the maintenance of the Soldiers' home in Washington. Very few soldiers stay in the army till they are eligible for the home, and there is a growing conviction that the tax is an imposition, besides being a great deal of trouble to the paymasters and being quite superfluous, as the institution has already accumulated a Sundays, 12.50, 6.00, p.m. Return at 6.32, 8.05, fund of $4,000,000, which is drawing $125,000 of interest, and the remission of this tax is now strongly urged. > Married His Mother-in-law. A man of Centreville, Wash., aged fifty-seven, was married a few days ago to his mother-in-law, a woman of seventy-seven years. A daughter of the latter, a woman of forty-seven years, was bridesmaid, and a frisky bachelor of eighty years was best man. So says LEAVE Boston FOR Arlington Heights | a news dispatch from a little town of the Evergreen State. The basic facts in this remarkable case having been presented, a curious, scarce believing public awaits further developments. Did this mother-in-law marry her relatively youthful son-in-law in the hope of subjugating him? Did he marry her with like intent? Did the daughter lend countenance to the marriage in the hope of seeing them fight it out, not caring who was the victor?-Portland Oregonian.

The French Nobility.

The French nobility is exactly twice as numerous now as it was before the great revolution of 115 years ago, which was aimed at the aristocracy and by which all titles of nobility were abolished. Previous to that time there were 238 French princes and dukes; today there are 460. At the beginning of the nineteenth century there were in all 83,000 titled persons in France, among whom less than 20,000 had a legal right to a coat of arms. There are now in the thirty-third year of the third republic 200,000 individuals duly possessed of patents of nobility. At the time when the nobility was all powerful in France the aggregate fortunes of the aristocracy amounted to one-tenth only of the wealth by nobility today.-Argonaut.

That Old French Gallantry.

People say that old French gallantry is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. Those who are prone to forget thus our national traditions should take to heart this little lesson from the Hungarian poet, Jokai:

At a banquet given in his honor the poet thanked the ladies present and ended with the words: "I drink to you, mesdames. May you live until my hair turns gray!"

The ladies were startled and hardly knew what to make of the strange compliment. Then Jokai, taking from his head a fine wig, revealed a head entirely bald. "My hair, as you see," he continued, "can never turn gray."-Paris Figaro.

Delay in the Simplon Tunnel. The opening of the Simplon tunnel is delayed. From May 15 to June 1 next is mentioned as the likely date. It is even suggested that the line may not be opened before the close of the Milan exhibition, which will be about September. For a distance of six miles from Brigg four ballast trains run daily, and in about a fortnight the laying of the telegraph and signal lines will begin. Some time this month the laying of the permanent way on the Italian side will begin, and about the end of March trains will be running from end to end of the tunnel. Steam will be used until "electrification" is completed.

Tamagno's Vanity.

When Tamagno, the famous Italian tenor, died not long ago it was found that he had directed in his will that his body be embalmed and placed in a lead offin, which should be deposited in a chapel, to which the public always might have access. Tamagno also showed his vanity, a characteristic conspicuous in him throughout his life, by asking that his coffin have a cover of plate glass, so that future generations might gaze upon his face. Most of the provisions of the will, however, will not be carried out, for sanitary

"But you can't back the automobile so far," she said, "and I don't intend to move for anybody. He should have seen us."

The husband pointed out that this was impossible owing to an abrupt turn in the road.

"I don't care," she insisted. "I won't move if we have to stay here all night." The man in the automobile was start. ing to argue the matter when the farmer, who had been sitting quietly on the

JACQUES BONHOMME.

His Remarkable Experience With Savan and His Imps.

One of the most curious and unaccountable of the mediaeval French legends is that of Jacques Bonhomme and his remarkable experience with Satan and his imps. According to the story, Bonhomme was the only poor man in the community where he lived, and in order to put himself on a financial footing which would give him a social standing among his neighbors he sold himself to the devil. Before the devil came to close the bargain and take poor Jacques to the realm of fire and brimstone Jesus and Peter wandered that way in disguise. Jacques entertained the visitors in royal style, seating Jesus in his best chair and plucking all the ripe cherries on his single tree to help make out a frugal dinner for the wayfarers. Peter continually urged Jacques to seek salvation, entreaties to which the hardened Frenchman paid but little attention.

When the strangers were ready to pursue their journey Jesus frankly told his host that he had no money to pay for the dinner, but that he would grant three "wishes." Jacques, who had for some days been heartily sick "No. The food was all right, but I of his bargain with Satan, asked that worried myself thin to think I wasn't whoever should afterward sit in the chair where Jesus had sat might not be able to arise therefrom until he (Jacques) should so will. The second wish was to the effect that whoever might climb his single cherry tree might remain there until requested to come down. The third wish was that whosoever or whatsoever should enter his purse might not leave against the will of the owner.

When Satan came to claim Jacques he was given the chair in which Jesus had sat and was, of course, held as fast by the "spell" as though he had been caught in a mammoth steel trap. When the imps came they were enticed to climb the cherry tree, and immediately they, too, were prisoners of the wily Jacques. Finally Lucifer Beelzebub and all the minor officers of hell came to look after their chief and the imps. Jacques, with purse in hand, met them at the door and persuaded one after another to dive into its cavernous depths in search of gold. He then closed the purse and in full view of the helpless Satan and the tree imprisoned imps pounded it flat on the stone threshold. Finally when the second officers of the infernal regions were flattened out of all semblance to imperial imps of darkness Satan called from the chair entreating Jacques to desist and promising a quittance from his obligations. Upon this assurance Jacques released the whole infernal tribe, and since that time they have all been ashamed to appear to men as they formerly did so frequently.

Executing Political Rivals.

In the reign of Charles II. the names of "Whig" and "Tory" were used for the two parties which we now call "Liberal" and "Conservative."

So strong was the hostility between the parties that when the king summoned his third parliament (1681) he was afraid for it to neet in London, which was very Whiggish, and he convened it at Oxford, where Toryism was and until 9.45, p. m., at Bedford with cars for strong. The Whig members, alarmed at this, rode into Oxford armed with pistols.

In the reaction which followed this display of force prominent Whigs were prosecuted on the evidence of perjured

All cars leaving Billerica at 45 minutes past the hour connect at Bedford for Concord until 9.45 p. m., then at 10.15, p. m. informers, and many of them suffered death. The Earl of Shaftesbury, the Whig leader, was accused of high treason, but was acquitted. In fact, no Tory juries would convict a Tory, and where the Whigs predominated no jury would convict a Whig. At last things reached such a climax that leading Whigs, in despair, formed a plan to compel the king to summon a free parliament, but they were accused of high treason, and some of their leaders were executed.-London Saturday Review.

Temperature of the Human Body.

It is remarkable what slight variation there is in the temperature of the healthy human body. The normal temperature is 96.6, and it is a fraction less than this one or two hours after midnight, while the maximum temperature occurs from one to two hours after the noon hour. The ingestion of food, fasting, exercise, all are factors in slightly varying the temperature. The great peculiarity about the temperature of man is its evenness under all conditions. Heat or cold causes but slight variation, and in man less than in any other animal. In extremes that would be fatal to many animals man can endure and enjoy good health under those circumstances. We read of arctic voyagers enduring a temperature ranging from 80 degrees to 90 degrees and even 102 degrees below zero, while, on the other hand, in the tropics, during the greater part of the year, the temperature ranges from 106 degrees to 110 degrees above, and yet men enjoy health in such varying tempera-

Ancient Salt Currency.

In various countries anciently and in some eastern ones down to the present time salt has been recognized as a medium of exchange. Cosmas speaks of heart of Africa in the sixth century.

Marco Polo in his work "Concerning vals of 10, 15 and 20 minutes to 11.22 p. m. the Kingdoms and Marvels of the East," written in the thirteenth century, tells us the Tibetans had none of the great khan's paper money, but used salt instead. Their small change was made thus: They had salt, which they boiled and set in a mold flat below and round above, and every piece from the mold weighed half a pound. On these molds the prince's mark was set, and none but the royal officers specially appointed was permitted to make it. | night. Eighty of these molds were reckoned n. to be equal to a "saggio of fine gold."

A SELFISH MAN.

The Prayer He Addressed to the Throne of Mercy.

The following example of a quaint and selfish prayer does not come from the liturgy: it is from "Glimpses of Ancient Hackney:" "O Lord, thou knowest that I have nine estates in the city of London and likewise that I have lately purchased an estate in fee simple in the county of Essex. I be seech thee to preserve the two coun ties of Middlesex and Essex from fire and earthquake, and, as I have a mortgage in Hertfordshire, I beg of thee likewise to have an eye of com passion on that county, and for the rest of the counties thou mayest deal with them as thou art pleased. O Lord, enable the bank to answer all their bills and make all my debtors good men. Give prosperous voyage and return to the Mermaid sloop, be cause I have insured it, and, as thou hast said the days of the wicked are but short. I trust in thee that thou wilt not forget thy promise, as I have purchased an estate in reversion which will be mine on the death of that profligate young man, Sir J. L. Keep my friends from sinking and preserve me from thieves and housebreakers and make all my servants so honest and faithful that they may attend to my interest and never cheat me out of my property night or day."

THE CHINESE MOTHER.

She Is Steadfast In Affection For Her Children.

The Chinese mother is very fond of her children. She is happy in their company and spends much time caring for them. In a Chinese family the birth of a child is a greater event than with other orientals. Long before the child is born the mother performs rites and ceremonies to propitiate the gods that her child may be a boy. After birth the little fellow is wrapped in old rags and in winter is sometimes put in a bag of sand sewed close around its neck to keep the little one warm. Great rejoicing follows the birth if the child is a boy; otherwise there is an air of chastened disappointment. But good Chinese parents make the best of their little lassies, becoming very fond and even proud of them. I have known more than one Chinese father to exhibit his toddling wee girl for approval, though always with the customary national verbal deprecation of what belongs to one. Indeed, this evidence of excessive courtesy may be found everywhere in this strange land. It is good form to vilify what is mine and laud what is of hands were clasped over his eyes. thine. "My good for nothing family are all still troubling the earth with their presence. How is your honorable family?"-Pilgrim.

MUMMIES.

Some That Do Not Come From the Tombs of the East.

Many persons who have an interest in archaeology will be surprised to know that all the mummies to be seen in museums have not been taken from faraway tombs in Egypt or other eastern lands. Well preserved mummies have occasionally been taken from the ruins of the cliff dwellers in the mountain canyons of Arizona and in New Mexico and southern California. These mummies, though very poor specimens of the mummifying art, are considered great treasures by scientists, because they give the anthropologist a vague idea of the strange people who had the earliest civilization on the American continent. The best of them are almost entirely ignorant of who the Aztecs and Toltecs were, how they looked and lived and why they have been so entirely obliterated from the face of the earth. The reason for this ignorance is found in the fact that no satisfactory remains of the dead Aztecs have been found. These people were cremationists, and they probably buried household effects with the dead, leaving little or nothing for the scientist to build a theory upon. Frequently a party of explorers in the valleys of Arizona will come upon sealed jars of burned bone dust.

Flowers In the Shade.

It is not unusual to hear a complaint that one's yard has no sun, and therefore flowers cannot be raised. But there are a large number of flowers that prefer shade to sunshine in summer. The begonia is of this class. Those who have north walls or fences may have great beauty during the summer by setting out the different kinds of begonias. Even the gloxinia, the achimenes and similar hothouse plants bloom splendidly throughout the summer season when grown on the north

TWO IN THE CAR

By Henry Berlinghoff

Copuright, 1905, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

£~~~~~~~~~~ "If only we could win that reward," said Jessie wistfully, "we would not have to wait until you got your raise." "I'm more likely to meet the robbers than the reward," laughed Halliday. The girl's face went white.

"Joe," she cried, grasping his arm, "do you mean to say that they are likely to hold up your ear?"

"I was only fooling," he laughed. "I didn't mean to scare you, dear."

She turned from the poster announcing $5,000 reward for the arrest of each of the three men who had been holding up the trains on the R. and G., and they went across the street from the station to where the polished marble of the soda fountain gleamed attractively in the light. Halliday did not commence his run until nearly midnight, and there was still an hour before the train should roll in from the east.

They said nothing more about the circular, but Jessie's face was clouded, and, try as he would, Joe could not coax a smile from her.

The Denver Red gang was operating along a line some 300 miles to the south, and Halliday had given no particular thought to the poster. Even now he did not realize that Jessie was conjuring in her brain visions of an express car shattered by dynamite and an express messenger, with a face very like his own, bleeding from a dozen wounds. When the whistle of the limited sounded far down the valley they arose and retraced their way to the station, and in the rush of checking his lists Halliday lost sight of Jessie. When at last he stood in the doorway of the car watching the loading of the baggage car behind he did not see the eager face upturned toward his. It was too late to jump down and go in search of her, and as he stood in the door of the car while the train rattled through the yards he wondered what had become of her. Usually hers was the last face he saw as they pulled out on their long run over the divide.

Then he turned to his invoices again and soon was so busily occupied that from breaking the rules about strangers he never heard a footstep until a pair reached for the shotgun in the rack by the door. He was in the very act of muttered Halliday, and he proved it the taking it down when a cry caused him to turn again and he confronted Jessie. "I know it's wrong and it's against

"I wish it were," he said quietly as he turned to his seat again. "Joe," she cried penitently, "I'll be very good and won't bother you at all." She crept back to the end of the car, where, aided by the dim light, she had concealed herself and snuggled down. It was a long run, and there was much work to be done. Suddenly Halliday gave a low whistle, and she sprang to "What is it, dear?" she asked anxiously. He pointed to an entry in the worth of diamonds in that safe." "You don't suppose they can find out, do you?" she asked anxiously. Joe shook his head. "I don't suppose so," he said; "but, all the same, they have been lucky in picking up only the cars with rich loads. That's probably why the shipment was made over this line."

For twenty minutes they talked of the possibility of a holdup. Then Jessie crept off to her nook again, and Halliday went on with his work. Suddenly, with a screech and a jar, the engine came to a stop. Joe sprang to the partly opened door to close it, but he was half a minute too late, for two burly forms sprang through the opening, and while one covered him with a pistol the other floored him, securely binding him with the bell rope.

Before he had concluded the engine had started again, and Joe knew that they were taking the car down the road to where they could work with greater freedom. They were climbing a grade, and while they were headed for the top the other cars were probably slipping back.

Presently there was another jerk as robbers turned to Joe. "Where's the key to the safe?" they demanded.

"I haven't any," was the cool response. "That's the through safe, I'm not supposed to unlock it."

"He must have the key somewhere," suggested the second man. "Lend a hand."

They knelt beside him on the floor and unceremoniously rolled him over as they searched his pockets. So occupied were they that they gave heed to nothing else until a stern command of "Drop that!" rang through the car, and they sprang to their feet to confront a short barreled shotgun in Jes sie's hands.

Instinctively they threw up their situation with a vigor of language that desk and took his departure.

E. led Jessie to remark that she would shoot anyway unless they kept silent.

> Still covering them with a gun, she moved forward to where Halliday lay and with one hand cut the cords which bound him. It was an easy task after that to bind and gag the two men, and together she and Joe, who had armed himself from the outlaws' belts, dropped from the car and got to the aid of the fireman and engineer, who were under the guard of the third member of the party.

Here they were four against one, and ten minutes later the engine and car were backing down the grade to pick up the train, while Jessie, now that the danger had passed, sat in Joe's chair, her girlish frame alternately shaken with laughter and tears.

"It was easy," she explained. "I was asleep until the train stopped. That woke me up, and I was just going to ask what was the matter when I heard the two men. "I thought it would be best to wait a moment and see what was happening. then I remembered how you jumped for that shotgun in the rack. "It was right over my head, and they were so busy with you that they never thought that there might be a second person in the car." "Weren't you afraid?" he asked curiously. "Awfully," she confessed frankly. "You see, I was afraid I might have to shoot them, and I never shot any one.

and I knew it would be horrid." "It's a wonder they didn't take chances of you missing and make a try anyhow," suggested Halliday. "Huh," came a voice from out of the darkness, "her hand shook so that Bill and I couldn't tell what she was going to shoot at. She was waving that gun round so she'd have blown the whole side of the car off if she had fired. If it had been a man we'd plugged him, but we haven't been used to feminine society lately, and we were kinder taken aback.' Sage, the superintendent, took much the same view of it the next morning when he had Halliday in the office.

"Of course," he said, "it was a distinct violation of the rules to have the girl aboard, and yet it was the fact that a woman was holding them up that did the trick."

"I didn't let her come on the car," protested Halliday, to whom a violation of the rules seemed more important than the capture of the outlaws. "Well," said the superintendent, with just the suggestion of a smile, "the best way to stop that is to get you a place as express agent and keep you in the station. That ought to keep your wife in the cars. With the larger salary and the $15,000 reward you ought to make a With a cry he sprang to his feet and pretty fair start." "Can't start any too quick for me,"

"The people haven't much money, you know, Miss Higgins, and they can't divide up other things very well. Even you couldn't, always. Suppose, for instance, you should go home and find your hens had laid fifteen eggs, how would you manage to give a tenth of them to the Lord?" "I should come back and take you and your wife home to tea with me," said Miss Higgins, with a grim smile. "and I guess when I'd made a scramble of six of those eggs and set you

John Wesley. John Wesley, founder of the Methodist church, was born at Epworth, England, on June 17, 1703, and died in London on March 2, 1791, aged eightyeight years. He was educated at Oxford university and entered the ministry of the Church of England, which corresponds to the Episcopal church in this country. Three years after General James Oglethorpe had founded the colony of Georgia he came over at Oglethorpe's request mainly to convert the Indians. This was in 1735. On the voyage he met and conversed with some Moravians, and on his return to England he studied that religion and was converted to it. After further study of the Moravian doctrines he was moved by unconquerable zeal to declare free salvation to all men through simple faith in Jesus Christ. On May 12, 1739, he laid at Bristol, England, the cornerstone of the first Methodist church building.

Borrowed Justice.

A country justice of the peace called upon a retired attorney and, after presenting a statement of facts, asked as the engine slowed down, and the two a matter of friendship for a legal opinion upon them. This the attorney gave. When the attorney had finished the equire rose and said:

"Well, those are just the facts in a case I am a-going to try next Saturday in my court, and I knowed you would give me the right kind of an opinion, so I come to you. The costs in that case will be just $7.50, and I am willing to divide with you. When I was a candidate some of the folks in my county 'lowed I didn't know enough to run this office, and I intend to show them that I do. The next case I have I will come to you again, and we will run that court right or bust a hamstring a-trying."

With that the justice of the peace hands while they commented upon the dropped $3.75 on his astonished friend's Patriotism.

Prof. de Sumichrast's statement in a recent address, that "patriotism is a sort of hysteria," is true as applied to a great well-to-do and educated class.

Patriotism is something more than cheering a flag on some special occasion public affairs when some personal motive out on the river that day canoing. causes action, deserves fully the title applied to that sort of patriotism by the speaker alluded to.

Daughters of the Revolution and kindred societies, including Sons of the American Revolution, who have uttered violent protests against the Harvard professor and sneered at his personality, might far better devote their energies to correcting abuses in our civil governments due more largely than to any other one thing to neglect on the part of many who are connected with these organizations. "We speak the things that we do know." The man who claims to be patriotic and then fails to exercise his rights and perform his duties as a citizen, wants to examine carefully the grounds of his claim. Such will find a selfish love of ease or an equally selfish purpose to succeed in business or official position is a governing force in their lives, and selfishness in any form is not patriotic. True patriotism is "love of country strong and deep enough to embrace a willingness to make sacrifices for it:" not alone a willingness which on some great occasion might lead one to lay down his life for country and flag, but that better willingness which responds to daily calls to duty and to the full discharge of obligations as citizens.

January Thaw.

The Boston dailies on Monday devoted at least a page each to incidents connected with the remarkable weather conditions on the day previous, when, during the afternoon, the thermometer marked "summer heat." There were descriptions of sea bathing at South Boston, illustrated with photographic pictures, accounts of prostrations from heat and many of the other characteristics of a hot wave in midsummer. There were throngs at beach resorts and every one found more comfort in the out door air than within doors where the slightest additional artifical heat made life a burden. The heat wave was wide spread, covering most of the country east any one time, but the corporation counsel of the Rockies, extending as far north as of the city-of Chicago has brought suits Nova Scotia, and has occasioned apprehension regarding the future health of all thickly settled portions. What effect this alone. In Boston any ordinance of the unusual and if the cold wave promised is to any degree severe, it may prove a death blow to myriads.

Rev. John Mills Wilson, pastor of Lexington Unitarian church, preached in Arlington First Parish church, last Sunday forenoon, in exchange with the Rev Frederic Gill. There was an excellent audience present and Mr. Wilson made a strong impression on his hearers. He has a voice of unusual depth and snorious quality, which makes a splendid vehicle for his thought and expression. Mr. Wilson took his text from Luke 7: 31-32, his subject being "The Game of Life." The lesson drawn was the impelling duty on every one to play his part in life, thus enriching his own and enlarging the life of his fellow men. That the greatest boon of all was life and the joy in living it. It should be played with enthusiasm. All hardships and trials should give zest to effort, while the joy of sorrow is its ennobling aid to spiritual growth. Those who wont "play," embitter their own life and are a stumbling block to the progress and success of their fellow men, also the working out of God's great plan for the human race. Practical philosophy and spiritual insight marked Mr. Wilson's tentien of all present.

Theatre Notes.

One of the few modern plays of Southern life that have held the stage for any considerable period "Alabama," is certain to renew old acquaintances and make many new friends when it is revived at the Castle Square Theatre next week. "Alabama" deals with life in the South at a pleasant period when the echoes of the Civil War had all died away, and in its vein of comedy is shown Mr. Thomas at his best. The characters are picturesque in the its name. The leading characters will be act-ed by John Craig and Lillian Kemble.

One of the most signal successes in Boston in many seasons is the "smart" musical play, "Molly Moonshine," which is Marie Cahill's starring vehicle for the present season, and which is eclipsing even its wonderful success in New York City by its phenomenal business in the present engagement. There remains only one week more in which to see Miss Cahill, as she will not play in New England any more this year. Her return to Boston has been the greatest triumph of her career. Alowell:—

held Monday afternoon in the ladies' parlor of First Parish church. Mrs. E. H. Atherton, vice-president of the National Alliance, was the speaker and had for her subject, "Alliance Work." Mrs. Atherton is an enthusiastic worker in her denomination and came before the Arlington branch with an endless amount of information regarding other Alliances, which she told in a most interesting manner. She first touched upon the work being carried on at the Morgan Memoextreme, and the entire play gives a faithful, a dramatic, and amusing picture of life in the Southern state from which the play derives and urged the support of this work by and urged the support of this work by the local branch. The special work of the "Post Office Mission" and the many places that had been benefitted by it, also that of the "Cheerful Letter" work and the work that can be accomplished in the "Study Class," yet another department, were all graphically described and instances given of their helpfulness. In closing, Mrs. Atherton emphasized the importance of the home work, which meant the increasing of religious life in the church, and pointed out that that object should be the aim of the Alliance, The speaker paid the local branch a high report of its year's work was the best ever seen by her. At the conclusion of the literary programme, which had been presided over by Mrs. R. F. Tupper, a social hour followed, when refreshments and Miss Alice Homer.

The February issue of Suburban Life is a beautiful product of the printer's art. The Mt. Pleasant Press of Harrisburg, Pa., is noted all over the country for their perfection in magazine making and, therefore, when Suburban Life last month announced that these printers had been secured beginning with the next issue, the February number was looked for with great interest. It can in no way fail to delight its readers. The beautiful hand-set type and the abundance of half tones admirably executed, go to make up THE WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS ARE CORDIALLY a perfect periodical. With this issue, the magazine has been considerably enlarged and is more general in its tone. It contains a wealth of practical and entertaining features.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. and Mrs. David Flynn and family take this method of returning their sincere thanks and genuine appreciation of the many acts of kindness of friends during the sickness and death of their son and brother, Patrick J. Flynn, and for the beautiful floral memorials presented at his funeral.

-The Tenuis Club held its monthly social Wednesday evening with the Misses Piper, of Park avenue. There was a large attendance of members and the evening proved an exceptionally enjoyable one. The committee devoted considerable thought in arranging the program. It included games of especial interest and those that required no little thought, such as the advertising game, that of the art gallery, and finally the cob-web. Great fun was gotten out of J. W. Harrington, the auction sale when the lunch baskets brought by the lady members of the club were auctioned off by Mr. A. B. Roaf, who was especially modest in his demands being willing to allow the young man to share the contents of the basket with a lady for the small sum of sixteen cents.

Twelve of New Zealand's most in teresting birds and four lizards, representmaining in the world, have been presented by New Zealand to the United States, and were sent on the Sierra during her latest trip from the antipodes en route to Washington, D.C. New Zealand's gift includes four kiwes, four Maori hens, four kea parrots and four tenatara lizards. The kiwe is a wingless and tailless bird, whose feathers are used in making mantles worn by the Maori chiefs. The Maori hen, known in New Zealand as the weka, is a brown bird, much larger than the American hen. The kea parrot is a bird weighing five pounds and is such a pest in its native country that a reward is offerare to be k ed by the government to induce its ex-tirpation. The tenatara lizard is about offensive odors. thirty inches long and is the only known survival of its race in the world.

John Pearson was distinctly annoyed. He would not have believed Eugenia could be so unreasonable. It was bad enough to lose Havens, who was the best stenographer he ever had, but when he finally secured another who could do satisfactory work, to have Eugenia object because the girl was young and pretty was enough to make a man lose all patience.

He strove to appease his fiancee's wrath by pointing out how inferior in beauty and grace the new stenographer appeared to him in comparison with herself. He tried to appeal to her reason, her pride, for faith in him, but to little purpose.

"You need not trouble to call again or to communicate with me until you have discharged that girl," was the ultimatum, and Pearson went away, angry and indignant, anathematizing ment if the jury had to be adjourned all women and their silly, unreasonable jealousy.

Miss Anthony was not often unreasonable and had had little occasion for jealousy. She hardly could have explained it herself, but her annoyance about the girl and her resentment toward her lover had begun when she had asked the name of the new employee and John had replied, "Anna Darling."

The tiny flames had been fanned and increased by every word of praise for | tioned Miss Anthony. Miss Darling that the unconscious could bear it no longer. She magnified his satisfaction with the girl's work into love for the girl herself, and she felt for the moment quite justified in demanding her discharge.

But with the next day's light Miss play reasserted itself. "How silly I was," she thought.

She resolved to send him a little note or a telephone message, but decided to He is-he is held there?" wait until evening. He was to take her to the opera, and on the way she would confess her unreasonableness.

The evening passed, and no John and no message to explain his absence. Ten o'clock, 10:30! "I won't be foolish," she thought firmly. I'll call him up by phone and tell him I want to say good night."

> The two girls were standing before Pearson's door, and Miss Darling was searching in her handbag for her duplicate key when a young man approached, saying courteously, "Were you looking for Mr. Pearson?"

> "Yes," answered Miss Anthony quietly. "Can you tell me if he will be in today?"

> "I think not. There are several important cases before the grand jury this term, and its sitting may last three or four days more."

> Miss Anthony recognized her informant as a young architect who had an office in the same building.

"I do not understand," she said. "What has Mr. Pearson got to do with the grand jury?"

"Mr. Pearson was seized yesterday by United States Marshal Brown to serve." As Miss Anthony's face betokened no enlightenment, he went on: "When the grand jury was polled yesterday there were three absentees, and in order to carry on the business it was necessary to fill those vacancies. The absent men are sick, and it would greatly retard the work of the governuntil they recovered."

Miss Anthony regained her poise. "Would Mr. Pearson have to go if he did not wish?" in stately surprise. "Yes. Any citizen is liable to such

"Don't," was Mr. B.'s counsel as he departed; "She came in the morning, but went "women don't understand such work." This of course only more firmly decided Mrs. Blank to go ahead, and when Blank returned that night he found ing several lacerated fingers, but she wore a triumphant air. "The screwdriver slipped once or twice," she explained in response to his inquiring glance at her bandaged digits. "Screwdriver slipped!" repeated Mr. B. in a dazed tone. "Great snakes, woman! You don't mean to say you unscrewed all the shutter hinges?" "Of course," said his wife complacently. "What other way could I get the shutters down?" For answer Blank lifted a shutter and pulled the pin out of one of the hinges, showing that the taking down of each shutter only involved the removal of two pins. When he figured that there were ten pairs of shutters and each pair required the driving of sixteen screws to put them up he swore while his wife wept.-Philadel-

WOMAN AND FASHION

For Youthful Figures. The least elaborate shirt waists are best for youthful wearers, and the one shown is recommended for its excellent shaping and ease of construction. The new shirt waist shows a smaller sleeve and no blousing at the waist line. The tucks on the shoulder in front supply an extra fullness, not unbecoming to youthful figures, while the tapering lines given by the tucks in the back are very pleasing in effect. The front may close beneath the box plait or with a hem. Any seasonable material may be used in the development of the design.

For the medium size three yards of thirty-six inch material are needed.

How to Wear a Fur.

Although the slender snakelike fur neck piece, sometimes called a scarf, is just as popular as ever, those who follow Paris fashions are not wearing it with one end slung over the shoulder any more. Instead they employ it as simply as possible, both ends dangling down in front. One good thing about the present fad is that the costly strip of sable or other fur isn't half as likely to be stolen or lost, for under the old system, unless a restraining hook or pin anchored it, it often slipped away and was lost to its original owner. Now that the fur meets in front and its ends hang down evenly, it may be clasped together under the chin, thus preventing having it snatched Skirt Trimming.

Skirts are being very much trimmed and in so many different ways that no one style can be said to prevail. There are any number showing plain, graduated or wavy lines of applique. Whether it be bias folds, tucks or ribbon hardly seems to matter so long as it is there and in plain evidence. Perpendicular trimmings, too, are highly thought of, and tunic or double skirts, flounces and an occasional hint of upper drapery and lower flounce assert themselves in the newer

An excellent mode for general wear is here pictured in a development of dark blue mohair. Nine gores are employed in shaping the plaited skirt, which flares in prevailing style at the

PUNS AND PUNSTERS

A DEFINITION OF THE FORMER AND EXAMPLES OF THE LATTER.

Some Specimens of the Better Class of What Is Called the "Lowest Form of Wit"-A Brilliant Coterie of British Punsters.

Is the pun a legitimate form of wit? Some people think not, and Dr. Johnson said that a man who would make a pun would pick a pocket. But the fact is that the general objection to puns is because of their frequent lack of wit-that is to say, it is directed to bad puns. We do not want to discuss bad puns or even to hear them. The point is, whether good puns are admissible as legitimate and commendable expressions of humor. It is of no use to say, like Sydney Smith, that puns ought to be in bad repute, and, although one finds an incorrigible punster-often, it is true, an incorrigible bore-in every little circlet of social life, one does not find the race of pickpockets to be increasing alarmingly in

It is probable that there are a few even in these days of culture capable of appreciating the profound witticism which De Quincey discovered in the jests for which poor Ælius Lamia was put to death by Domitian.

If we want to argue the legitimacy of puns we are obliged to fall back on the old discussion as to the difference between wit and humor. The definitions are legional, of course, but not one of them is wholly satisfactory. "Knowledge comes and wisdom lingers," Tennyson says, and perhaps we might found upon this a parody, with some approach to truth—that wit sparkles and humor permeates. But there is little profit to be got in analysis of this kind. What is funny isn't necessarily witty, but what is funny must have in it or suggested by it some of the essence of humor. Thus Charles Lamb was not so far wrong when he said that the most farfetched and startling puns are the best.

The familiar inquiry, "Is it true that the first apple was eaten by the first pair?" is farfetched, but one cannot deny the humor of it. Again, in the conundrum, "Why is blind man's buff like sympathy?" "Because it is a fellow feeling for a fellow creature," there is a direct application which is also unquestionably humorous. Then, as another example of a pun which is absurdly apparent, there was Douglas Jerrold's remark about a man to whom he had repeatedly written in vain for some money.

"I have written him," said Jerrold to an acquaintance, "but got nothing." "Strange," said the other, "for he is a man full of kindness." "Yes," rejoined Jerrold, "unremitting kindness."

A pun which requires explanation in brackets is indeed simply intolerable. The Oxford scholar who, meeting a porter carrying a hare through the streets, asked, "Prithee, friend, is that thy own hare or a wig?" required no commentator. Nor did Tom Hood, who, when all is said and done, remains the prince of British punsters. He puns as naturally as he laughs. A babe can see the point of his jokes and the crustiest dry as dust cannot resist

Theodore Hook is thought by many to be equal to Hood as a punster, but Hook was labored and slow in comparison. There is an impromptu air about Hood's puns which is incomparable and an unexpectedness even when you Frederick Locker once or twice seemed to have Hood's unconscious ease, as thus:

He cannot be complete in aught Who is not humorously prone. A man without a merry thought

Can hardly have a funny bone. John Hill Burton relates a legal joke which to the legal mind has all the charm of a pun. One day a bailiff, serving a writ, had been compelled by the defendant to swallow the document. In a state of great agitation and anger the officer rushed into the court. over which Lord Norbury was presiding, to complain of the indignity. He was met by the expression of his lordship's hope that the writ was "not returnable in this court."

Bret Harte, by the way, was not usually regarded as a professional wit, and yet among the good things which cling to one's memory is the couplet in the "Heathen Chinee:"

Concealed in his nails, which were taper, What is common in tapers-that's wax. Somebody has written a parody in which a candidate for examination even beats the record of the Mongolian: Concealed in his palms, which were spacious, What is common in palms-and that's dates.

Speaking of palms recalls the famous pun of the bishop of Oxford, who when asked by a lady why he was nicknamed Soapy Sam replied, "Because, madam, I am always getting into hot water and always coming out with clean hands."

Perhaps it may be said that some of these examples are not true puns. But a pun is not necessarily a twisting of spelling and a contortion of syllables, as the writers of burlesque and "comic" papers seem to think. It is play upon words and to be really entitled to be considered witty should play both upon the sound and the sense, if possible.—London Tit-Bits.

The home is the cornerstone and bulwark of the state, and everything which tends to keep alive and renew its influence and associations should be cherished and encouraged.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

GREAT ROADS OF ANTIQUITY

The Most Magnificent Were Those of the Mediaeval Peruvians.

Perhaps the earliest road on record is that mentioned by Herodotus as having been constructed by Cheops, the Egyptian king, in order that stones might be dragged along it for his pyramid. In the opinion of the Greek traveler, the work of making the road was as great as that of building the pyramid, for it took ten years to construct, and it was composed of polished stones with figures carved on them, but this does not compare in magnitude with the highways constructed by the Peruvians while mediaeval Europe was still in a state of semibarbarous disorgani-

The two principal roads in Peru ran from Quito in the north to Cuzco, the capital, the one along the sandy and level strip of coast, the other along the plateau of the Andes, a region of unparalleled engineering difficulty. The length of the second has been estimated at from 1.500 to 2.000 miles. It crossed sierras buried in snow, bridged ravines with walls of solid masonry, mounted and descended precipices by staircases hewn in the solid rock and ran in interminable galleries along the sides of intractable mountains.

Where rivers had to be crossed bridges were made with ropes of stout, pliant esier twisted to the thickness of a man's body and stretched over the stream sometimes for a distance of 200 feet. These cables swung side by side, and, fastened with planks so as to form a footway, were drawn through holes in enormous buttresses of stone specially constructed on each bank and were secured firmly at each end to heavy beams of timber. A railing of similar osier material gave the passenger confidence as he crossed the oscillating bridge that sank dangerously in the middle and mounted rapidly at the sides.

The great highway was twenty feet wide and was built with flags of freestone covered with bituminous cement. It was measured out by posts set up at every league. Caravansáries and magazines were stationed at convenient distances for the Peruvian soldiers on their military expeditions, and a regular postal service had been organized by which highly trained runners, relieved every five miles, could convey messages a distance of 200 miles in the twenty-four hours. The roads were kept in beautiful order, the inhabitants of a district being responsible for that portion of the highway which traversed their land. At the same time it should be remembered that there was no wheel traffic to cut up the level surface of the hard pavement. There is considerable irony in the fact that it was not till the Spaniards forcibly introduced their so called civilization the face of Rea. into Peru that the famous roads began to fall into disrepair. - London batto valley scheme," said Rea. What Wellington Was Doing.

When Sir John Steell, the sculptor. had the Iron Duke sitting for a statue he tried to induce him to look warlike. All his efforts were in vain, however, for Wellington seemed, judging by his face, never to have heard of Waterloo or Talavera. At last Sir John lost his patience. "As I am going to make this statue of your grace," he exclaimed, "can you not tell me what you were doing before, say, the battle of Salamanca? Were you not galloping about the field, cheering on your men to deeds of valor by words and action?"

"Bah!" said the duke in evident scorn. "If you really want to model me as I was on the morning of Salamanca, then do me crawling along a ditch on my stomach with a telescope little girl. It's a long time since in my hand!"

Art In the Capitol.

They were talking of Speaker Cannon's new picture, and it moved Delegate Mark Smith of Arizona to discuss the picture of Speaker Reed which adorns the capitol. Reed never could see any likeness and always regarded the picture with hostility.

"It was in the height of the Democatic storm of denunciation that beat upon Reed," said Mr. Smith, "that a Republican tourist hit the capitol and Philippine Problem Solved.

New York Times.

Champ Clark has found a solution for the Philippine troubles. He found it while George Bronson Rea was testifying before the house committee on ways and means, of which the Missourian is a member. The Cattobatto valley sugar scheme was mentioned. whereupon a sarcastic smile overspread

"Ah, there's my old friend, the Cattowould be all right except for the fact that the big Moro who dwells in that happy valley with his big knife slices up every Filipino who goes there."

"Do you mean that the Moro kills every Christian brown brother who dares come into that part of the world?" asked Clark, with incredulity in every word.

"That's the very thing that happens," said Rea, with a superior smile, for it was his object to show that sugar growing is not one of the industries that can be made to wax and grow fat in the archipelago for reasons other than climatic.

Leaning over to his neighbor, Clark said: "Well, there's the solution we've and their households and their women all been looking for. Send every Filand their children and their relatives ipino to that valley."-Pittsburg Dis-

"Sitting in a certain case," he said, "I heard an attorney say to a woman witness—a pale and slender woman witness:

"'Now, tell the court, please, what you did on the morning in question between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock.'

"'Well,' that slender and pale lady began, 'I first dressed the three children and saw that their breakfast was properly served. Then I darned two pairs of stockings, mended a hole in beds, bathed and dressed the baby, and picked fresh flowers for the parlor vases. Then I ordered the day's meat from the butcher, the bread from the baker and the vegetables from the grocer. It was now time to'-

Blowed Up.

The late Bishop Eastburn of Massachusetts was a man of very imposing appearance and when robed in his big sleeved canonicals gave the impression of sailing under full canvas. In the pulpit he had a habit of drawing himself up at intervals, with chest raised and head thrown back, which gave him a very pompous air. A little boy of Newburyport not fully inured to long sermons and wearying under his heavy periods mildly suggested to his mother that he would like to "cut the rest of it," but she tried to beguile him with the assurance that the good man was just ready to stop when he eagerly replied, "Oh, no, mamma; he isn't, 'cause he's just blowed hisself up again."-Boston Herald.

Arlington Financial Affairs.

On Wednesday of this week the accounts | 2419. of the town treasurer for the year ending December 30th, 1905, were closed, and some of the facts which appear from an examination of the same will undoubtely be of interest to our citizens and tax pay-ers. During the year the total fixed indebtedness of the town, which on December 31st, 1904, amounted to $663,948.64, has been reduced $10,350.00, while the indebtedness on account of temporary loans is smaller by $6500 this year than it was at the close of business a year ago. The entire outstanding temporary loans now amount to $38,500, all of which are held by our Sinking Fund Commissioners and the Trustees of the Pratt Fund, and it is interesting to compare this amount with that existing at the close of business December 31st, 1902, when the amount footed up $106,616. The highest rate the treasurer was called on to pay for money borrowed on the market in anticipation of taxes during the year was 31 per cent., while the lowest rate was 3.14 plus a premium of $1.00. The amount of cash on hand is only $3,664.27. a large cash balance.

·· At the regular meeting of Lexington Grange, which was held on Wednesday audience listened to the programme arranged by the Worthy Lecturer, Arthur E. Horton. The literary hour opened with two selections on the violin by Miss Possibilities." The lecturer dwelt largely on the theme of right living from the common sense point of view, putting in a plea for the home life and the every day life which must of necessity be the foundation of our social structure. This plea, which was made more effective by Miss Williams' rendering of "Home, Sweet Home," led up to a stirring address on patriotism. At the close of the lecture the audience voiced its appreciation of the lecturer's sentiments in our national song, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," led by Miss Williams. The evening was set down in the memories of those present as an uplifter toward a life more symmetrically useful and beautiful.

···· Tuesday evening, Jan. 23d, the carefully planned exercises of installation of Independence Lodge No. 45, A. O. U. W., took place under such happy conditions that the occasion was a signal success and much to the credit of officers and committee in charge. District Deputy Grand Master Workman Messer, of Concord, was the installing officer and Grand Army Hall, where the ceremony took place, was found to be finely adapted to the occasion. The officers installed were as follows: -

Master Workman,-Chas. E. Wheeler. Foreman,—George C. McKay. Overseer,—Chas. G. Kauffmann. Recorder,-Chas. H. Sherman. Treasurer,—John McKay. Financier,—Everett S. Locke Guide,—George N. Gurney. Inside Watchman,—Stephen De Veau Outside Watchman, -Elmer B. Glass. Past-Master Workman, -A. H. Burnham.

An important feature of the occasion was the presentation of a handsome lodge The presentation speech was made by Master Workman Chas. E. Wheeler, who was genial and fraternal in his allusions to the recipient, who also responded in suitable terms to the occasion and the honor his brother workman had done him by extending him the generous gift. The evening closed with a collation and a social time participated in by Bro. Messer and staff, with other guests.
